MESSENGERS.

BY THOMAS S. COLLIER.

A flock of blue, a thrill of song, Where leafless trees toss in the gale, A brighter glow the hills along, Green glimmers down the vale.

With merry calls, the robin wing Across the meadows brownly clad;
Or in the orchard shadow sing Their carol clear and glad.

There comes a dream of violets now,
Of purple skies serene and far,
Of sweet bloom on a swaying bough, White shining like a star.

The maples have a crimson crown,
The sunset shows a deeper gold,
And bright the brook goes rushing down To where wild waves are rolled.

Soon will the pollen-dusted bee Boon where the clover blossoms blow, And low the warm and fragrant breeze Breathe the balm where sleep the snow.

CURIOSITIES OF ANIMAL LIFE.

With a piece of wood in their hands, or with their fists only, orang outangs are able to drive off even elephants.

In a wild state, a baboon can easily overpower two or three men, if they are unprovided with weapons of defense.

The elephant, the rhinoceros, the tiger and the hippopotamus are the only animals that are not afraid singly to fight the lion.

If the armadillo is in danger of being attacked, and happens to be near a precipice, it will contract itself into a ball and roll itself over.

M. le Guat saw in Java a female chimpanzee that made her bed very neatly every day, lay upon her side, and covered herself with the clothes.

The flat-headed hussar, a fish found in Essequibo, will march in droves over dry land, as fast as a man ordinarily walks, using its serrated fins for legs.

A four-fingered monkey, in its native state, has been seen to go down to the edge of a stream, rinse its mouth and clean its teeth with one of its fingers.

There is in Tranquar a species of fish that not only go upon shore, but climb the fan-palm, and seek their insect food among its leaves and branches.

Bats possess some additional sense which enables them, when deprived of sight, to avoid obstacles as readily as when they retained the power of vision.

The horn of a rhinoceros, when cut through the middle, is said to exhibit on each side the rude figure of a man, the outlines being marked with small white strokes.

Orang-outangs, in a state of domestication, will sit at a table like men and eat every kind of food, using the knife and fork; and they will drink wine and other liquors.

When a lion is roused he never goes directly forward, but takes an oblique course, rearing with a slow, proud motion, going from one side to the other, and bounding rather than running. The lion is a long-lived animal; in his native forest his age exceeds that of a man. When a lioness fears that her retreat may be discovered she often hides her tracks by brushing them out with her tail.

A Boston bugler may blast away to his heart's content for hours and nobody calls him to account, but let a Boston drummer simply say "Daru it!" and somebody's feelings are injured.

"You opponent was a bright speaker," the citizen said to the candidate who had not been elected by two thousand majority. "Yes," was the sad reply, "very bright. He cast reflections upon me all through the campaign."

Free of Cost.

Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption, Coughs, Colds, Asthma, Bronchitis, etc., is given away in trial bottles free of cost, to the afflicted. If you have a severe cough, cold, difficult breathing, hoarseness or any affection of the throat or lungs, by all means give this wonderful remedy a trial. As you value your existence you cannot afford to let this opportunity pass. We could not afford and would not give this remedy away unless we knew it would accomplish what we claim for it. ## A TRIP TO ST. AUGUSTINE.

The Novelties of That Ancient City.

JACKSONVILLE, FLORIDA, April 4, 1881.

EDITORS REPUBLICAN: It was a beautiful morning when we stepped on board the fine steamer "John Sylva-re" bound for St. Augustine. The boat came out full and warm; everscented with the odor of balsam, and wild flowers, wafted thither by southern gales; while on either shore the foliage is bursting into the freshest and tenderest green, contrasting finely with the dark verdure of the perennial laurel, oak and magnolia, which line the river's side.

By the time our steamer was fully under way, the passengers (among whom was Jay Gould and family) had assembled on the decks to feast their eyes on each interesting point and feature of the river, and to gaze in wonder at the colossal shores, which now stood against miles away on either hand, and our vessel glided her trackless way to the center of the river.

Turning toward Jacksonville it seems but a small village, and completely covered with trees at that. If one were suddenly placed where we now are, the first question would be, "What lake is this?" and such it seems. The name "Wekiva" (chain of lakes) given the St. Johns by the Indians was a true one, for we were continually passing through lakes from two to five miles wide.

The first place of interest was Mandarin, famous as the winter residence of Mrs. Stowe. It is but a small settlement, of perhaps a half dozen dwellings scattered about on a tongue of land projecting toward the center of the river and forming a kind of bay. The old look is northerly toward Jackso-ville, which lies about twelve miles down the river. The location of Mandarin is pleasant, and the view fine and far-reaching.

The water near the banks of the river on the lower St. Johns is quite shallow, necessitating a projecting pier of some length at all the landings; and this is especially the case at Mandarin.

Mrs. Stowe's house is near the bank, and but a few rods to the left of the shore-end of the pier. It is dark brown in color, of a moderate cottage size, wholly unpretending in appearance, and quite inexpensive. The chief feature of her place, as seen from the river, is its magnificent towering shade-trees, the water-oak, draped in moss. They attract and fasten the eyes of all, by their unusual size and beauty. Their wide spreading branches give an air of seclusion and dignity to the quiet home beneath. Her place consists of about forty acres, several of which have bearing orange trees.

Across the river we landed at a small but pretty place called Orange Park, famous only for having the longest and finest pier on the river—it is 1,500 feet long.

Next we stopped at Hibersia, and saw the beautiful residence of the late Mr. Kilbourne, who at one time owned the half of Milwaukee, and for whom Kilbourne City, Wis., was named.

Passing on, our next landing of interest was at Green Cove Springs, the first town of any size between Jackso-ville and Palatka, a distance of about seventy-five miles. It is built on the shore of a pretty bay or cove. The spring is the attraction at Green Cove, distant not over ten rods from the river, and is in front of the principal hotel. It has made for itself a bed, twenty by fifty feet, and lies some ten feet below the surrounding level; it flows freely from its fountain-head into this deep reservoir, and then runs rapidly off to the river. The water has a temperature of about seventy-five degrees; it bursts up with considerable force, and is clear as crystal; has a slight sulphurous taste, and leaves miserable road through swamps and pine woods about fifteen miles.

The appearance of St. Augustine, to the visitor, is as quaint as its history is amplified and bloody. Nothing like it is seen in this country; and having been built by a people so different in manners and customs from our own, it has been surrounded with an interest not shared by any other city in the land. It was founded by Menéndez in 1565, was captured in 1587 by the French under De Gourques; was burned by the English under Drake in 1586, unsuccessfully attacked by Oglethorpe in 1740 and 1743; was ceded to England by Spain in 1763 and re-ceded to Spain in 1783; was annexed by treaty to the United States in 1821; so we see one reason for its being so interesting, aside from its appearance.

Its principal building material is a unique conglomerate of fine shells and sand, known as coquina rock, found in large quantities on Anastasia Island, at the entrance of the harbor, and which is easily cut in blocks and hardens with exposure.

The streets are very narrow—one is but seven feet wide, and twelve and fifteen feet is called very wide. One advantage of these narrow streets in a warm climate is, that they furnish shade and act as a flue, making a strong draught. The old houses are high roofed, and have balconies on the second story, where the streets are so narrow. Opposite neighbors can easily shake hands and converse confidentially from these balconies. There are still remains of the high, solid stone garden walls remaining in some parts of the city. The streets in older times were paved with shell concrete, portions of which are still visible above the shifting sand, and were kept swept clean and no carriages allowed to pass over them.

Built as a military town, the city was formerly walled across its northern end, which sufficiently protected it, as it stands on a peninsula nearly surrounded by St. Sebastian river and St. Augustine bay. The gateway of the old wall still stands and is quite an imposing ruin, with its ornamental towers and loopholed sentry boxes. The ditch before the old wall is clearly marked, and even yet partially filled at high tides.

It runs from shore to shore and was evidently broad and deep.

The old fort, once called San Juan, then St. Marco, but now known as Fort Marion, is a curiosity. It stands on the sea-front at the upper end of the town, the wall or stockade formerly running from it to the gateway and west to the river. Its material is the invaluable coquina rock. It was a hundred years in building, and was finished in 1750. While owned by the British it was said to be the "prettiest fort in the king's dominions." Its castellated battlements, its formidable bastions with their towering guns, its lofty and imposing salient point, its circular and draw bridge, its circular and ornate sentry-boxes at each parapet angle, its commanding look-out tower, and its stained and moss-grown walls, impress the external observer as a relic of the distant past. A ramble through the interior strengthens our first impression.

First we passed through massive arched doors over which is the Spanish coat of arms, into a hall which led to an open court in the centre and from which all parts of the fort can be reached. We saw the Homish chapel with its portico and inner altar and holy-water niches, dark passages, gloomy vaults and more recently discovered dungeons. In one of the latter is an iron cage containing a human skeleton chained to a huge ring. We saw the dungeon from which the Indian Oseola made his escape by a small hole eighteen feet from the floor in 1837. The view from the

The two old orange groves are very beautiful and interesting.

Within a few years several very fine houses have been built by wealthy northerners who spend their winters here, but they detract from rather than add to the interest of the ancient city.

St. Augustine is a vast rose garden; there is one rose tree on St. George street particularly noticeable for its great size and beauty. A welcome sight was the green sod; although the grass is rather coarse it makes a very thick sod, and is very green. M. M. R.
